Mrs. Christian French had a birthday party the other day. Experience has enabled her to acquit herself cleverly on these occasions, as she did on this, which was her 103d. The remarkable feature in this case that although born in New Jersey is Mrs. French has spent her whole life in the immediate vicinity of the place where she was born.

Talk is cheap when you don't talk over a long distance telephone. But the last tariff talk in Congress knocked the l. g. telephone out cold. The figurer for the U. S. Bureau of Statistics estimates that $32,000,000 in revenue was lost by that talk. But if that was all the country lost by it it wouldn't matter so much, for that tariff is a bleeder.

They have dug up an old law in Connecticut under which a Connecticut man could marry a dozen women or more if he wanted to and couldn't be prosecuted for bigamy or any other amy unless he lived with some of them. We suppose the old fellows who got up that law considered that a man who didn't live with the woman he married wasn't married much.

Albert Isaacs, a New York man, claims to have invented a process by which, by the use of certain chemicals, steel may be cast without flaws. FIREMEN'S CONVENTION.

THE TOURNAMENT CONTESTS YESTERDAY AT FAYETTEVILLE.

Officers of the Association Elected—Fireman's Parade—Wilmington Hook and Ladder Truck Boys Made a Fine Appearance—The Races and the Winners of Prizes.

[Special Star Correspondence.]

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 4.

The State Firemen's Association in its evening session, after transacting some routine business governing the tournament contests, proceeded to the election of officers.

Mr. Tom. C. Daniels, of Newbern, placed in nomination, in a neat complimentary speech, that peerless fireman, Capt. J. D. McNeill, of Fayetteville.

Mr. W. C. VonGlahn, of Wilmington, moved that nominations be closed, and Capt. McNeill was unanimously elected, which was done amid great enthusiasm.

Capt. McNeill thanked the convention in his usual happy style.

The following are the other officers elected:

First Vice President—E. G. Parmele, Wilmington.

Second Vice President—Dr. J. W. Griffin, Greensboro.

Secretary—J. C. Michie, Durham.

Treasurer—T. A. Green, Newbern.

Statistican—M. V. S. Capps, Salisbury.

Charlotte, Greensboro and Goldsboro extended invitations to the association to hold the next convention there, and after a hot fight Goldsboro won.

After transacting some routine business the convention adjourned and everything is in readiness for the tournament, which promises to be the most successful ever held.

The reception tendered the visiting firemen by President McNeill was largely attended and was one of the enjoyable features of this convention.

The tournament of the State Firemen's Association was formally opened this morning by the grandest street parade ever held since its organization. The streets of Fayetteville were a perfect mass of human faces and each company was enthusiastically cheered all along the route of march. The parade was formed at nine o'clock on Hay street in front of the LaFayette Hotel. The parade was under command of Maj. E. L. Pemberton, Chief Marshal, with sixty-five assistants. All the companies presented an elegant appearance in their parade uniforms, some of them being very grotesque and laughable, and it was a very hard matter for the judges to decide who should take the prize; but it was finally given to Delgar Reel Co. No. 8, of Sumter, S.C., who wore a uniform of spotless white, trimmed with blue. Our own W. H. & L. boys made a fine appearance and were complimented by President McNeill and Chief Schnibben. The truck was decorated with the handsome flag of the steamer Wilmington, and the following beautiful young ladies honored the boys by riding with them, viz: Misses Isler, Goldsboro; Pierce, Warsaw; Lilla Young, Winston; Fanny Williams and Ellen Underwood, Fayetteville.

The first race on the programme was the steamer contests, with the following entries, viz.: Greensboro; Atlantic of Newbern; Newbern, of Newbern; Winston; Adrian of Wilmington. The "Newbern" carried off the honors, with Winston second and the Atlantics of Newbern third. The following was the time made by each engine:

Newbern, of Newbern	8:41½
Winston	8:49½
Atlantic, of Newbern	4.08½
Greensboro	5:12½
Adrian, of Wilmington	6:03½

In this contest the prizes were awarded as follows: First prize to Newbern of Newbern, $60; second prize to Winston, $30; third prize to Atlantic, of Newbern, $20.

[Special Star Telegram.]

9.30 p. m.—Rowan street to-day was crowded with people and had the appearance of an exposition being in progress.

In the hundred and fifty yard hand-reel race, Fayetteville was victorious; time, thirty-one seconds (prize, $60). Newbern, of Newbern, second; thirty-two seconds ($30). Atlantic, of Newbern, ruled out on account of defective coupling.

In the grab reel race, Durham No. 1 was first; time, thirty-two and a quarter seconds (prize, $40). Charlotte, second; twenty-three seconds ($25).

In the long distance contest Winston threw a stream two hundred and thirty-nine feet, and the Adrian, of Wilmington, two hundred and eighteen feet. In this contest decision was reserved upon protest of Adrian.

The quick steaming contest was postponed until to-morrow.

The amateur play of "Jephtha and His Daughter" is being given to-night.

The fire alarm is sounding and the town is wild.

The STAR notes with regret the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, which occurred yesterday morning at 9.15 o'clock at her late residence on Second street, between Church and Castle. She is survived by one son and two daughters, all of whom live in Fayetteville, whither the remains will be taken for interment, leaving here at 12.15 to day. The deceased was about 50 years of age.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Mr. Spencer D. C. Van Bokkelen's Tragic Death Near Newark, N. J.

The New York Herald of the 1st inst, gives the following account of a fatal accident to Mr. Spencer D. C. Van Bokkelen, a brother of the late Mr. Adrian Van Bokkelen, of Wilmington:

Spencer D. C. Van Bokkelen, an aged accountant of this city, met a tragic death on Friday night by falling from a train as it crossed a high trestle near Newark, N. J. As he slipped from the platform of the car he instinctively seized the guard rails, and, hanging thus, was dragged over the ties until exhausted. Then his grasp relaxed, and he plunged down thirty-five feet and was instantly killed.

The trestle where the accident occurred is just west of the Passaic river, at Newark. Mr. Van Bokkelen was a passenger on a Morris and Essex train, which crosses the trestle at full speed. Before reaching this point, he went out on the platform of the car. There is a sharp curve in the road just west of the trestle, and it is thought that the lurch of the train in rounding this curve caused the old man to lose his footing and pitch forward from the platform. No one saw him fall.

Several men were working on an ice pier thirty-five feet below the trestle, and one of them glanced up as the train sped toward them overhead.

"Look!" he cried.

The men looked up as he pointed, and stared in horror. The train was passing over the trestle, and through the ties they could see an old man with white hair clinging to the brass rails guarding the steps of the next to last car. Every moment his body was flung down against the ties, then it would bound up and drag along for several yards. He was making desperate efforts to swing himself up on the step, but his strength was gone from him.

It could last not long. As the workmen stared upward helplessly, the man's hands slipped from the rail, his body shot downward, turned over and crashed onto the pier, while the train sped on.

The men ran to him and raised his head. A glance showed that he was beyond aid, and death must have been instantaneous.

Word was sent to the authorities, and the body was removed to Mullins' morgue, at Newark. Coroner Washington later gave a permit for its removal to Mr. VanBokkelen's late home, at Glen Ridge, N. J.

Mr. Van Bokkelen was a public accountant of long standing and widely known among business men and corporations down town. His office was in the Syndicate Building, at Nassau and Liberty streets. He was a widower, seventy years old, and leaves a grown up family. He was in good circumstances.

CAROLINA CYCLE CLUB.

Additional Officers and Committee Appointed.

The following additional officers of the Carolina Cycle Club have been appointed: Second Lieutenant, C. H. O'Barry; First Sergeant, E. C. Warren Corporal, Oscar Peck; Assistant Bugler, Julius Philip Taylor.

Mr. Stuart Heinsberger, Miss Lee Bell and Mrs. P. Heinsberger, Jr., were constituted a Reporting and Literary Committee, with Mr. Heinsberger as chairman.

Messrs. Ike W. Solomon, R. M. Westcott and N. E. Gillican have been appointed trustees to have charge of the sinking fund. This fund is fifty per cent. of the receipts of the club, and will be used in preparing a race track and building a club house.

Wilmington wheelmen are very desirous of getting these improvements, for the possession of them entitles the club to membership in the Southern Circuit, and that means plenty of crack riders from the North to come down here and add the incentive of their presence to local short.

The club gives its next regular run next Friday night. About one hundred wheelmen will participate.

Base Ball This Afternoon.

Manager Thos. Davis of the Atlantic Coast Line base ball team, and Manager Jas. Black, of the O. A. N. ball team, have made arrangements for a series of three games between their respective teams, to be played Aug. 6th, 18th and 20th, at Hilton Park. The first of the series will be played to-morrow, and an exciting nine innings will, no doubt, result, as the strongest men of both teams will be on the field, to say nothing of the rooters.

— A dog was run over by a street car yesterday afternoon on Front street between Market and Dock.

RALEIGH NEWS BUDGET.

DEATH OF REV. DR. BLACK OF THE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.

Meeting of the Populist State Committee Called—Work of the Railroad Commission—Grand Encampment of Odd Fellows—A Building Boom in Raleigh.

[Special Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, August 4.

Maj. H. L. Grant is in the city to-day. There can be no doubt of his reconciliation with the Governor.

Clerk Brown, of the Railroad Commission, who does a large part of the work of that body and compiles all the statistics, says that the slight alterations made in the recent assessment of the railroads for taxation by the commission when the roads' taxes were increased about $8,000,000, will not reduce this amount as much as $100,000. The changes were of minor importance and the assessment practically stands as made in Asheville.

The August Bulletin is now being made. There is a statement in the Bulletin about the Government declining to accept it as second class mail matter. The Bulletin says this was done by the Government upon the complaint of Mr. Jas. H. Ennis, a former employe of the Agricultural office. Mr. Ennis represented to the Department at Washington that the Bulletin would compete with an agricultural periodical which he intends to publish.

Auditor Ayer has received a letter from Jas. H. Portis of Marble Hill, Mo., asking if a large amount of money left by his father's grandfather was not being kept in trust by the State Treasurer. He wants to get it. All the fools are not dead yet.

Governor Russell has been invited to be present and act as vice president at a public meeting in San Francisco, August 14, 1897, under the auspices of the Lincoln Monumental League.

A great deal of building is now going on in the city. Besides two new stores, which are being erected on Fayetteville street, there is in progress of construction, an annex to the Academy of Music, an office building, corner of Martin and Salisbury streets, the Baptist Female University, an annex to the colored deaf, dumb and blind institution. The old Central Hotel is being fitted up for the Royall & Borden Furniture Company, and among other dwellings being erected are the handsome residences of Capt. J. E Pogue, W. B. Hutchings, J. S. Wynne, Capt. Capehart, Julian Timberlake, and many other smaller buildings throughout the city.

News has just reached the city of the sudden death of Rev. Dr. W. S. Black, the presiding elder of this district in the M. E Church. He was well known throughout the State. None of the particulars of the case can be learned at this time.

Grand Encampment of Odd Fellows meets in this city at 8 o'clock this afternoon.

Rev. Dr. Thos. E. Skinner presents his matchless library to Wake Forest College. It was sent out last evening. The library comprises about 4,000 volumes and cost over $10,000. Many of the books cannot be purchased at any price now.

[Special Star Telegram.]

William Samuel Black, presiding elder of the Warren district, died at his home in Littleton, of apoplexy, after a brief illness. He was born in Cokesbury, South Carolina, in 1836; was chaplain of the Twenty-sixth S. C. regiment; transferred to the North Carolina Conference in 1870. He had been presiding elder of the Wilmington, Salisbury and Warren districts six years; was editor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate; for three years Superintendent of the Oxford Orphanage Asylum; a member of the General Conference since 1874. His first wife was Miss Mary Fleming, of South Carolina. They had three surviving children, William, Benjamin and Birdie. Benjamin is a Methodist minister. The second wife was Mrs. Kate Kate P. Bryan; no children. The body will be brought here for interment, the funeral to take place to-morrow afternoon from Edenton Street church, of which he was once pastor.

Chairman Fountain has called the Populist State Executive Committee to meet August 11th here. The business of the meeting is not stated.

Funeral of the Late Mrs. Carpenter.

At 6 o'clock yesterday morning the solemn funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Alfred Carpenter began in St. John's Episcopal church, the rector, Rev. Dr. Carmichael, officiating. A goodly number of friends and relatives were present to pay their tribute of respect to the departed.

At the conclusion of the services the remains were borne tenderly from the church while the choir sang the closing verses of the hymn "Abide With Me." The pall-bearers were Messrs. A. D. Brown, G. Z. French, C. H. Robinson, Jas. C. Munds, H. B. Jewett and A. B. Sandlin.

The interment was made at Oakdale cemetery in the presence of fond friends who placed beautiful flowers upon the grave.

Lively Row on Water Street.

Lively times were enacted yesterday morning on Water street. Capt. F. A. Leland, of the schooner Albert L. Butler, now at this port, and a sailor of the same craft, got into an altercation, during the progress of which the sailor was badly beaten. Capt. Leland went before Justice Bunting and submitted to a charge of assault and battery, but was arrested shortly afterwards on a warrant from Justice McGowan's court, charging him with assaulting the sailor with a deadly weapon. Upon hearing the evidence in the case Justice McGowan adjudged Capt. Leland not guilty and dismissed the action.

Yesterday afternoon late the sailor, A. Hanson, obtained a warrant for the mate of the Butler, charging him with injury to personal property.

Preparing for New Business.

The warehouse room of the Clyde Steamship Company has been somewhat limited, and partly on this account and partly in the expectation that business this Fall is going to pick up considerably, a new warehouse is being erected close by the old one.

STUMPS AND SAPLINGS.

Base Ball at Maxton—An Exciting Game for the Championship.

[Star Correspondence.]

MAXTON, N. C., Aug. 3.

An exciting, as well as an amusing game of ball was played here to-day for the championship, between the Stumps and Saplings, resulting in a score of 9 to 8 in favor of the Stumps. The teams were as follows:

Stumps—M. McNair, Captain, R. P. Johnson, Bob Patterson, W. B. Harker, H. O. McNair, N. A. Carter, Smith, W. F. Henderson.

Saplings—A. J. McKinnon, Captain, J. S. McRae, J. K. Hill, I. B. Sellars, J. B. Weatherly, J. M. Burke, Winston, Lewis.

[Those who know the "old coons" who participated in the game can well imagine that it was "amusing," if not exciting. Considering the many winters that have frosted the head-pieces of the players, the game must have been "hot stuff."—STAR.]

WHERE REFORM IS NEEDED.

There is a good deal of reform needed these days but in nothing is it more needed than in the pension system, where we are least likely to have it. The politician of the North would as soon think of jumping into a den of rattlesnakes as of attacking that system, while the Southern politician feels that he would be playing a lone hand in attacking it and have his motives called into question for doing so. The Southern people, of course, pay their full proportionate part of the pension money—about one third—while not a tenth part of what they pay out comes back to them, but the appropriations are made and the pension laws passed on the assumption that the Southern people have nothing to say about it and that it is none of their business. The Northern soldiers and their friends control votes enough to be a potent factor in politics and that settles it.

We are paying out in pensions now nearly twice as much as it took to run the Government just before the war, and this over thirty years after the war ended. There is no living or dead man who ever thought when this pensioning began that the annual expenditures would ever approximate the enormous figures they have since reached and now stand at, about $141,000,000. Gen. Grant and Gen. Garfield thought when they reached $38,000,000 that would be the maximum, and that they would steadily decline from that, but on the contrary, they have steadily increased, and would have gone much higher if it hadn't been for the defeat of the Republican party at a time when there were pension measures pending which would have added millions more to the annual expenditures.

Senator Ingalls, of Kansas, then in the Senate, had a dependent pension bill which he was pushing, and which would have passed if the Republicans had held possession of Congress, which might have doubled the expenditures, for it provided not only for adding an indefinite number of names to the rolls, but also for arrearages which ran back through all the years to the time of service. There was practically speaking no limit to the expenditures that might be called for under these pending measures.

It is scarcely necessary to observe that the Republican politicians inside and outside of Congress found the pensions one of the most effective political instruments to influence a very numerous and powerful element of the people in the North, not only the soldiers themselves, but their friends and thousands of people who while they didn't take any special interest in the soldiers thought this was a good way to facilitate the raising of armies in future if need be, and thus avoid bounties, drafts, etc., which became so common in the North before the war closed. Democrats, Populists and other politicians saw the effective use the Republicans were making of the pensions, and they, too, dropped in, caught on and became as warm advocates of "liberal pensions" as the Republicans, who had invented that thing, and the result was that the pensions were stretched to cover thousands upon thousands of names which had no business upon the rolls, and the expenditures steadily and enormously grew until the $38,000,000 in Garfield's time increased four fold, notwithstanding the number of pensioners and soldiers who were not pensioners who died in the meantime.

Long ago it came to be a question in the administration of that department of the Government not as to who should go upon the rolls but as to who should not, and it became the office of the interpreters and administrators of the laws to decide what names might not go on, rather than what names should, and all who were not specifically and clearly prohibited from going on went on. If there were doubts they got the benefit of the doubts, for that put money into the pockets of the pension attorneys who had the swing of the Pension office, and perhaps some money into the pockets of the pension officials also, and it also made some political capital for the "patriotic" gentlemen who advocated "liberal pensions" and stood by the "gallant men" who "saved the Union." That's the genesis and the progress of the pension system as we have it now and have had it for years during which time the American people have paid out thousands of millions in pensions, more than double as much as the war, costly as it was, cost.

Within the past four years we have paid out in pensions something over $563,000,000. In the same time there was collected in internal revenue not quite $383,000,000 and in customs duties a little over $618,000,000. Now compare the amount paid out in pensions with the amount collected from internal revenue or from customs duties and see how near the pensions come to swallowing up either. In either case there would be a very small margin left, so that practically something in the neighborhood of over half the taxes collected from the people to defray the expenses of the Government go to paying these pensions, and this is thirty two years after the war closed. Other countries pay pensions, but there is not and never was a country under the sun where such a monstrous fraud was even conceived much less carried out. But the worst thing about it is that we will have to grin and bear it as there is no hope of relief and no hope of the burden being lightened in any other way than by the natural process of the death of the pensioners.

MINOR MENTION.

The action of that colored Baptist Association in Virginia in so emphatically denouncing the criminals and the crime which has become of such frequent occurrence in the South has attracted pretty general attention and been strongly commended, as it should be, both in the South and in the North. In referring to it the Philadelphia Record says:

"Nothing could be more admirable in spirit than the resolutions adopted the other day by the Bannister (colored) Baptist Association in annual session at Houston, Virginia, admitting the alarming increase of what has become known in the South as the "usual crime," and pledging the co-operation of the colored race with the whites in efforts to stamp out the hideous offence and bring the guilty to justice. The moral influence of the colored churches in the South can scarcely be overestimated; and the coincident exertion of this great social force on the one hand, and a firm determination of all classes and races on the other hand, not to permit lawless vengeance to take the place of legal punishment, but to make justice swift and sure, should certainly lead to the abatement of the infamy. Certainly no sturdier blow has been struck at negro lynching than that delivered by the colored Baptists in their manly resolutions."

Every one knows that the masses of the colored people have no sympathy with the perpetrators of these crimes' but unfortunately some of their own race in the South and in the North, who assume to speak for them, have spent so much time in denouncing the avengers of the crime as actuated more by race prejudice than by an abhorrence for the crime perpetrated, that they have put themselves, indirectly at least, and with them their race, in the position of apologists for if not defenders of the crime and of the criminals. The tendency of these denunciations, wild and incendiary as some of them were, was to create the impression that it was the negro race that was being attacked in the retribution visited upon the ravishers, thus appealing to the sympathy of the race for the men who were represented as suffering for them, not because they committed the outlawed crime so much as because their skins were black. The resolutions of the Virginia colored Baptists, to which we refer, will have a good effect in neutralizing the other kind, and in our opinion more truly voice the sentiments of the masses of the colored people. They should be followed up by similar resolutions throughout the South, and thus let the world and the perpetrators of this crime know that they are abhorred by their race as well as by the white race.

The New York Sun, which for a good many years has been masquerading as a Democratic paper, doesn't fancy the caperings of the Bynum-Cleveland faction in putting up tickets and promulgating platforms, when it ought to quit all such foolishness, the Sun contends, and march right into the Republican camp as it has done. Commenting upon an editorial in the Louisville Courier-Journal stating the aims and purposes of the Bynum Cleveland combine, the Sun says:

"Tariff reform comes in, of course, as a life member; but currency reform, by turning over to the banks the Governmental function of issuing money, must constitute the bulk of the National Democrats' platform.

"Politics is a very powerful passion, and the National Democrats will have a politics and a machine of their own at any cost. With a free silver ticket all nominated and ready in the State of Kentucky the Courier-Journal strikes out for a policy which is calculated to revive the Bryan party, even if it was in truth as dead as African slavery.

"Upholders of honest money and opponents of the pestilent savagery of Bryanism must understand that the task of holding the ground so providentially won in 1896 is difficult, and calls for all possible determination, energy and concentration of force."

The concluding paragraph of this extract reads as if the one who wrote it was not in a happy frame of mind as to the outlook for the party to which the Sun has at last, after working in disguise so long, openly professed it allegiance. We may incidentally remark that the Sun is a paper that is not in the habit of getting scared at trifles, and conclude that when it thus voices its fears it has some pretty good reasons for doing so.

That was a significant item published yesterday, stating that the Rome, Ga., cotton factory had secured a contract from the Government for 1,300,000 yards of heavy duck for mail sacks, the cost of which will be $250,000, a fraction over 19 cents a yard. This is a pretty big contract, and the significant thing about it is that it must have been secured after competition with other great mills of the country, which would not likely to let such a job go by without putting in bids and their lowest bids, too, so that the Rome factory must have under bid the others, which is either a proof that its operators must have been satisfied with a smaller profit or that they are so situated that they can make a greater profit on these figures than competing mills could. This kind of work has heretofore been done by Northern mills, so that this is practically a capture from them, and may prove to be not only a capture of this kind of work, but may result in carrying the manufacture of sails for vessels, and similar goods to the South. The success of the Rome factory is a good advertisement in that direction.

This applies equally to corn, tobacco, cotton and other crops. —— Watermelon thieves are quite numerous throughout the county as well as in town. In this he says that Gilmore asked him if he wanted to get some money. He replied he did. Then Gilmore told him that he had seen Mr. McDonald place a large sum of money in his trunk in his bed-room, and that they could rob him. Wright says that he refused the offer, when Gilmore placed a pistol in his face and compelled him to acquiescense. He then went with Gilmore, and he stood watch while the outlaw broke into the house, chloroformed the occupants and brought out the trunk. Wright will probably die. Gilmore has not yet been captured.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—— Mr. Comptroller Eckels has piped a feeble "me too" to Secretary Cage's prosperity predictions. During the Cleveland Administration Mr. Eckels was permitted to lead the interview band.—New York Journal, Dem.

—— Some of the northern knife factories are badly hit by the new tariff because it prohibits the giving of premiums with tobacco or cigarettes, and several large contracts for knives are therefore called off. This is not the only instance in which the republican measure has hit, indirectly, those who were among the loudest in its advocacy. The knife manufacturers are well protected, but this feature may be considered a blow below the belt.—Savannah News, Dem.

—— It is reported that the wording of the new tariff law is such that the hides used by the large shoe manufacturng establishments may come in free of duty in spite of the fact that it was the purpose of Congress to place them on the dutiable list. This at least is the opinion of several smart lawyers, and we infer from it that in thepreparation of the hide schedule somebody managed, as the gamblers would say, to "snake the box."—New Orleans States, Dem.

—— The "Spanish diplomatist who is in close touch with Senator Canovas," and who unlimbered his jaw and vapored at London on Saturday last anent a possible war between Spain and the United States, was too discreet to reveal his identity. The notion that Canovas might seek to save the Spanish dynasty from its domestic foes by courting the defeat of Spain in war with the United States is almost too absurd for contradiction. Was the Second Empire in France saved by Sedan?—Philadelphia Record, Dem.

A WAITER'S ROMANCE

Not far from the city hall is a well known cafe and restaurant that is patronized nightly by a party of young fellows, chiefly newspaper men and actors, who gather there after their day's work for gossip and a midnight lunch. The only rule observed by this jolly Bohemian gathering is a rigid one. The party always sits at the same table, in a far corner, and must always be served by the same waiter, a florid faced young Dutchman with sandy hair and thin, yellow mustache, who went by the name of "John" in the present instance. None suspected their waiter had a story until on one occasion a guest of one of the regular habitues told of an escapade he had had the previous summer at Antwerp. "John" stood by, listening, seemed to enjoy the point of the story hugely, and then told us some things about Antwerp that showed he knew the place well. "I ought to," he said "I was born and raised there, and expect to go back when I save $500.' This aroused our curiosity, and, with a little pressing, John told us his romance.

His father and brother, he said, were manufacturing jewelers in Antwerp, and the family were rich. Hans—for that was this real name—had been apprenticed under an elder brother as a goldsmith, intending to make jewelry as his father and brothers did, and his grandfather before him. The young fellow gained a good foothold in his craft, married and settled down in a home of his own. Three months later a sudden glut in the jewelry trade made it necessary for his firm to dispose of their surplus stock, quickly and for cash, or become seriously pressed for funds. The United States was chosen as a market and Hans for the salesman, as he only could speak English. The chief profit of the transaction was to be in smuggling the jewelry into the states by way of Canada, thus avoiding duties and obtaining the advantage of cheaper European labor.

Hans said he undertook the journey for his wife's and father's sake. The venture was successful and very profitable. The financial crisis was safely passed. Then the firm induced Hans to try it again, and after that he took frequent trips to America. The salesman smuggler would land at Halifax and take a train to a little town close to the border line of the states. Arriving there he would seek a lonely spot, generally in the woods, where he would bury the jewelry, incased in a stout oilcloth bag. Then he would cross the line, have his baggage inspected, stop at the first station and return and disinter his stock of merchandise at night. The miles of wilderness along the Canadian borders of the states and the impossibility of patrolling it by customs officers made the evasion of duties a comparatively simple matter, Hans said, for he only had to take the simple precaution of choosing different and widely separated points each trip he made across the line.

About two years ago the salesman found himself in Cripple Creek, Colo., with nearly $500 in cash, the proceeds of his last installment of jewelry. He started out to see the town, and late in the evening was inprudent enough to show his wallet of money in a drinking and gambling resort where he had been carousing. Then he left for his lodgings with somewhat unsteady gait. Suddenly he thought he heard a step behind him and was about to turn, when an overpowering blow was dealt him on the head, and he fell forward unconscious.

The next thing he remembered was in a hospital bed in Denver. He had been there three weeks and was slowly convalescing. The doctors told him that memory, mind and almost life itself had deserted him in the interim, but that his crushed skull had been trephined and that he would probably recover.

His money was gone, of course.

As soon as he was able he wrote to his relatives in Antwerp, telling them what had happened. After weeks of waiting he received a reply. His father did not believe the story, and intimated that he had stolen the money. His father, they said, had influenced "the firm" not to prosecute, and "the firm" had decided not to do so upon condition that Hans should never leave the States, or least never return to Antwerp unless he brought the money back with him.

But inclosed in the letter was another that made the invalid's heart leap. It was from his wife. She did not believe him guilty, of course, and was about to sail, with her 2-month-old child, for America. This would take all her available pin money, so she expected her husband to meet her in New York city. The date of the receipt of the letter showed, when compared with the sailing day, that the vessel would reach New York in about ten days.

Hans was penniless and in a hospital, and 2,000 miles away his wife would be waiting for him, alone, and a stranger in a land whose very language was unknown to her. The young husband was almost frantic, and the worry affected his condition so seriously that finally one of the doctors asked him to unburden his mind to him. To this stranger Hans told his story. The doctor had heard many romances, and his position made it impossible for him to assist the invalid personally, but he gave the story to a reporter on one of the Denver papers, who published a long "display" article about it. Four days later a letter came for Hans postmarked "Cripple Creek." It contained a crisp, new $50 bill, and a scrawl, written in lead pencil, in which "Bill" said that, although he "was d——d hard up when he took the wad, he was no hog," and returned enough therewith to enable Hans to reach his "woman and kid."

In this way Hans reached New York and found his wife, and together they began their struggle against fate. After a few months they drifted to this city almost penniless. The wife took in plain sewing and in the daytime Hans worked at his trade. From 8 in the evening until midnight the husband was also "extra" waiter in the restaurant, earning for that $3 a week and "tips." Every spare cent not needed for household necessaries went into a savings fund.

"It is pretty hard scratching sometimes," the waiter concluded, "but some day she and I will go home to Belgium together, and I must take back the $500 to prove I'm an honest man and no thief."

Weeks passed after this recital, and most of us had forgotten it altogether, when one night a stranger appeared in Hans' place. "Gone to Antwerp," explained the proprietor, when we asked him. There was a moment's pause, then one of the fellows proposed the jeweler's health, "and a long life and a happy one." We drank it with a will.—Asa M. Steele in Philadelphia Times.

Never Loses His Head.

Some years ago, when William J. Stillman of New York city was reporting a disturbance in Greece for the London Times, a report was sent out that he had been beheaded. One of his friends, hearing the report, telegraphed to the correspondent this message: "Rumor here that your head has been taken off. Is it true?" It was not until the message had been sent that it occurred to the sender that if the rumor were true Stillman would be the last man in the world to speak about it. But the message reached Stillman, and this was his reply: "My dear boy, a newspaper man never loses his head."

OXYGEN AS A HEALER.

A Record of Several Valuable English Experiments.

During the Zulu war Dr. George Stoker, who served during the campaign as an army surgeon, had an opportunity of observing the method in which the natives treated their wounded comrades. He noticed that they carried them to the highest point attainable, and there exposed the wounds to the purest air and the action of pure water. This simple remedy was swift and sure, the worst cases yielding rapidly under its influence, doubtless the healthy state of the blood and the abstemious lives led by the natives having a good deal to do with the matter. Dr. Stoker was led to believe that the oxygen cure might be applied to ulcers, burns and wounds of a similar nature, and on his return to this country he made several experiments on such cases, and the more he saw of it the firmer was his belief in his discovery. Bacteria consist of two kinds —the harmful micro-organisms and those necessary to the system, in order that the mechanism of the body may be carried on satisfactorily. Before the discovery of antiseptic surgery the risk which was run wherever a raw surface was exposed to the air was enormous, but with the introduction of antiseptics into the treatment the danger was reduced to a minimum. Iodoform has always been the special medium for use in the case of ulcers, and it is not a pleasant one, but it tended to hold the bacteria at bay. Now, however, it has been noticed that in cases where oxygen has been applied and where the wound is healing the progress was marked by the presence of common organisms and that if a relapse occurred the bacteria disappeared, so that one is led to the conclusion that a certain number of these living organisms are necessary in the formation of new and healthy flesh.

It was decided to enter upon a wider field of operations and test this experiment further—for it must be borne in mind that as yet it is only an experiment—and accordingly a committee of ladies and gentlemen, under the presidency of Baroness Burdett-Coutts, undertook to establish a hospital at 85 St. George's square, S. W. The hospital is small, but if funds were forthcoming a larger house could be secured. The oxygen used is said to be first generated in an iron funnel, and thence it is pumped into india rubber bags, according to the strength required. The part affected is then inclosed in a wooden box with a glass lid and eased round with oilskin. A tube communicates with the box and the bag, and in this way the oxygen is introduced into the box. Other apparatuses are contrived for the back, head and other parts of the body. The first effect is the cessation of pain, and the healing properties are quickly discerned. One case of an ulcer of 40 years' standing had yielded to the treatment in three weeks, another of 18 years in an equally short time, and many others had a similar tale to tell. Not one of the least of the virtues of the oxygen is its deodorizing power. It has also been tried on cases of baldness, with the result that the hair grew rapidly and in a short time was in a normal condition. To what length the curative properties of oxygen may be carried remains to be proved, but it has at least one advantage, that of extreme economy, for, beyond the cost of the oxygen, which, it is said, comes to about 2½ pence for 24 hours, there is no expense for dressings or medicines.—British Sanitary Record.

COTTON MARKETS.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, August 4.—There was very little speculative activity in cotton futures to-day and prices were dominated almost entirely by the operations of professional traders. A rather better class of English advices gave the market a steady undertone at the opening and prices advanced 1 to 2 points on local buying orders. Reports of light rains in several sections of Texas brought out considerable long cotton shortly after the call, which resulted in a loss of 5 to 7 points. This selling movement soon run its course, however, and with favorable news from Fall River buyers again took hold and the market regained the early loss by mid-day. New Orleans representatives were moderate sellers during the break. The market steadily improved throughout the afternoon and finally closed steady at a net advance of 2 to 5 points, the gain being chiefly in the late months.

A Cheap Hair Cut.

There is in New York city a little German barber shop the proprietor of which has a grievance against the Irish race that will not be wiped out for some time. One evening in his hearty German way he welcomed a customer, a burly son of Ireland, with an enormous shock of hair, who roughly cried:

"Oi want a hair cut. Do yez moind?"

"Yah, von hair cut mit der head?"

"Yis, that's it, wan hair cut," And with a yawn the Celtic gentleman threw himself in the chair.

While the barber was preparing his scissors the Irishman nodded a few times and in a short while had apparently dropped into a doze. The barber went indnstriously to work, and the locks fell with every clip of the scissors. Meanwhile the Irishman slept on. At last the hair was cut and brushed, and the barber exclaimed:

"Ach, dat is goot. You looks joost like von gentleman."

With a start the man of Ireland awoke and gave a glance in the mirror.

"Say, Germany, did Oi ask yez to cut my hair?"

"Yah, dot's vot I do."

"What's that? Did Oi say Oi wanted my hair out? Did Oi?"

"Yah, yah! Dot's right."

With a rush the Irishman grabbed him by the collar.

"Look here, Germany. Oi said Oi wanted a hair cut. That's one hair—do yez hear?—the long wan that was hangin in front. For what do yez want to be cuttin all of thim? Oi'll have the law on yez at once fer that." And with a wrathful countenance he slapped on his hat and left the place before the astonished barber could recover from his fright.

When the rollicking Irish wit turned the corner, he was heard to remark, "Faith, that's a chape way to git a hair cut."—Harper's Round Table.

THE VEIL OF ISIS.

To lift her veil, whose broideries
Are horned moons and lotuses,
None dare, though priest and thurifer
Charm her with frankincense and myrrh
And long drawn mystic harmonies.
Of all mankind's divinities
None secreter than this of his.
Behold, 'tis but to anger her
To lift her veil!

Natheless, in each man's time there is
A lifting of her veil. Each dies.
To die, when all the hate and stir
Are o'er, to be a slumberer,
To dream perchance—oh, is not this
To lift her veil?

—Victor Plarr in New York Tribune.

A TRIPLE PORTRAIT.

The little village of Joweuski, in the south of the Flowery Kingdom, is far removed from outside influences. Among the agents and helpmates of civilization completely unknown in Jowcuski on account of its all forlorn situation, which enables the people to live so hapily among themselves, is the looking glass. One day several years ago a party of English tourists passed through Jowouski in their usual hurried style, but staid at any rate long enough for one of the ladies to lose a handglass in the jinrikisha in which she had ridden.

When Kiki-Tsum, the owner of the vehicle, saw his find, he looked it over intently and with the most astonished face in the world.

"As I live," he cried, "this is the portrait of my dear father, dead these four years! There is his good brown face, which always seemed to wonder at something or other; there indeed are his piercing eyes, only he appears so much younger and sturdier than he was when last I knew him. What does it meant Perhaps it's a warning from the gods; perhaps it's a present from some saint."

Kiki-Tsum wrapped the mysterious article in his silk handkerchief and placed it carefully in the pocket of his wide shirt. When in the evening he arrived home, he looked for a hiding place for his treasure, and finally he resolved upon an old pot of earthenware, which was not in actual use and therefore never troubled. There was no more secure spot in his household, he thought. Kiki-Tsum said nothing to his young wife about his adventure, for, he calculated, "women are too curious and too talkative, and I do not want all the neighbors' advice of my good or bad luck, whatever it may be."

During the next few days Kiki-Tsum labored under great excitement. Day and night he thought about the portrait he had found, and frequently he left his bed or his work to go and see if his treasure was still in his possession. Lili-Tsee, the young man's lovely bride, could not make out what brought her husband so frequently to their hut when engaged outside. She never knew about his leaving her bed. That would have made her unhappy. First she was content with Kiki-Tsum's explanation that he had come home just to see her lovely face, but when he kept it up day after day she grew suspicious.

"Why should he appear with an anxious face and leave with one steeped in importance?" she mused. Still later she discovered that Kiki-Tsum before going out made it a point always to remain in the little back room for a minute or two. The key to his secret behavior must be somewhere in that room. Lili-Tsee made it her business to investigate, and there was not a piece of furniture or decoration in the room she did not turn inside out, but her work was all in vain. Finally she mouse-trapped her husband at the moment he was hiding the pot in which she kept her rose leaves. Kiki-Tsum, like all guilty men, quickly invented an excuse or explanation of his carryings on. He lied. The pot had stood on one end only, and he had been obliged to correct the negligence of others.

"Ah, yes, poor man!" said Lili, kissing the deceiver goodby, but he had scarcely got across the street when she clamberod upon a chair and discovered—what? A mysterious something. She lifted it with care and brought it up to her face to examine it. Oh, cruel truth, the portrait of a woman, and Lili had considered Kiki-Tsum a model husband! The poor girl sat down upon the floor and cried bitterly. That, then, was the reason why he came home so often. The feeling of injury gave way to that of indignation, of wrath. Again she looked for the portrait and now wondered thas Kiki-Tsum could love a woman with such a face—eyes swollen, cheeks pale and dirty, and now the eyes expressed rage and contempt. Lili-Tsee became frightened. No; she would never look at the thing again. Then she grew despondent. Life indeed was not worth living, and as to cooking dinner—she could not think of it. When Kiki-Tsum arrived home in the evening, he was astonished to find neither meal nor wife awaiting him. Searching for both, he made his way to the back room.

"So that is the way you treat your wife after only a few months of marriage? Where is your fidelity, you who are always talking about your manliness?"

"The woman is crazy," said Kiki-Tsum to himself, and then he added aloud: "What ails you, Lili-Tsee? Tell me the meaning of this nonsense."

"Nonsense!" cried Lili-Tsee. "You hide the portrait of your paramour in my rose pot and dare dispute its sinful purport? Take it; watch over it; carry it on your heart. I don't want to see it. The monster—the ugly face!"

"But I don't understand," gasped the husband.

"You don't, don't you?" cried the little woman. "Ah, but I understand it all. You love that woman in the frame."

Now it became Kiki Tsum's turn to grow angry. "That picture," he said, "represents my late father. I found it some time ago in my carriage, thinking the gods had sent it to me. To save it and keep it secure I placed it in the rose pot."

"You must think me an idiot," cried the wife. "Have I not known your father, and am I unable to distinguish between the face of a man and that of a woman?"

The two continued their wordy battle, which became more fierce every minute until the neighbors were aroused. They sent for the village priest to restore order. The bonze came. "My children," he said, "what are you quarreling for? Tell me at once, so I may try to decide who is the guilty party?"

"Father," exclaimed Lili-Tsee, "my husband secreted the picture of a woman in my rose pot. That caused all this trouble."

"I swear I never possessed another portrait but that of my sainted sire!" And the husband raised his hands to heaven.

"Children, children," said the holy father with much dignity, "before I decide your quarrel let me see the portrait."

It was handed to him, and the bonze looked into the hand glass steadily for a minute or longer. Then he shook his white head and decided in a voice ringing with authority: "You are both in the wrong. This picture represents a venerable and holy man. It is a wonder to me you did not recognize the saint in it. I will take it with me and place it among the holy relics of our church."

Then the bonze blessed the young couple after Kiki-Tsum and Lili-Tsee had made up and kissed and went away praising the gods for the great discovery he had been permitted to make.—Exchange.

A BIG YARN.

"Six years ago this coming Jan. 19 I reached Spikers Station on the 5:14 train in the afternoon. I was traveling for a wholesale grocery firm and was engaged in working among the stores in this part of the state. Spikers is a little place. Only one local train a day stops there. I got off the train and hurried over to the store. As it was already dark, the place was filled with loafers, rough looking fellows, who stared in a vacant way as I unpacked my sample cases and spread the goods upon the counter. I knew the storekeeper and had no trouble in selling him a bill, so that when I finished business with him at the end of an hour I felt amply repaid for my trouble. Then I began to look about for a place to spend the night.

"I found that the Pittsburg express stopped at Schmucker's Junction, three miles up the track, and that by good, brisk walking I would be able to catch it comfortably. I made arrangements to have my cases sent on by the local train next day and then took my leave, after having received explicit directions to follow the beaten path along the railroad.

"As I left the store I noticed, but did not heed, the sinister glances that three of the loafers who were sprawled along the counter cast upon me.

"It was a clear night. The moon was just rising above the mountains in the east. The air was cold and crisp and the ground frozen hard. In a few moments I passed the last house, reached the railroad and was reeling off rod after rod of the hard white path that stretched before me. I soon arrived at the woods and was plunging deep into their heart. I had set for myself a brisk, bracing pace, and at first felt not the slightest uneasiness at my lonely condition, dark and forbidding though the woods seemed, but as I proceeded deeper and deeper, until looking behind me I could make out nothing down in the woods, I heard the sound of wheels. I stopped and listened. It became louder and louder, as if the vehicle was approaching near me, and then began to die away and soon was lost in the noise of leaves and limbs.

"When I had gone about 1½ miles, I found myself within a few yards of what appeared to be a wood road that wound out from among the trees, crossed the track and then lost itself in the blackness on the other side. I had just passed this road when I was startled by the sudden sound of a football behind me, and before I could turn two horny hands had seized my throat and held me fast. I tried to cry out, but my effort was stopped by a firm clutch of the strong fingers. Then two men appeared, and in another instant I lay helpless on the ground.

"The three ruffians were big, burly fellows, so heavily muffled up that, beyond a few stray whiskers, I could make out nothing of their faces. All my efforts at kicking and struggling proved vain. One sat on my legs and coolly tied my feet, another bound my arms, and then the clutch on my throat was loosened, and I was allowed to breathe. In a few moments they had taken everything of any value that I had upon my person—a watch and my money, not much, only a few hundred dollars.

"This done, I thought that I would be allowed to go, but reckoned wrongly. One seized my hands and another my feet, and they laid me across the track. My horror knew no bounds when I realized what this meant. One of the brutes tied my feet hard down to the rail. I begged and threatened, pleaded and expostulated, offered them a reward for my release and dire vengeance if they left me there, but in vain. They coolly wrapped the rope round and round my ankles and under the rail, and then, fastening my arms at the elbows, they proceeded to secure my body.

"The tighter I felt the rope drawing to hold me until the express freed me from the track and the world, the more I pleaded. The final answer was a blow on the mouth and the information that they 'wasn't goin to have me tellin tales.' Then they left me.

"I heard the rattle of wagon wheels as they drove away, and then I was alone. I twisted and tore and writhed in my frantic efforts to free myself until exhausted. Time passed slowly. I pictured myself lying in pieces along the track.

"At last I heard a ringing in the rails, a low, plaintive ringing that told me that the express was coming. Only a few moments, and it would be on me. I twisted and writhed in one last desperate struggle for freedom. I tore and kicked until the ropes cut deep into the flesh, and my clothes where the thongs were grew hot from friction.

"The ringing became louder until at last it developed into a roar. I looked down the track and saw the faint gleam of the headlight as the engine rounded a curve. One more minute!

Frantically I struggled. Nearer and nearer came the flying train. Louder and louder became the roar and ringing in the rails, so loud that it drowned my wild screams. The headlight was blinding me. All was over! No; I continued to struggle. Then I felt a burning sensation in my legs, a terrible heat, and an odor of burning clothing followed. I raised my head, and the gleam of a flame met my eyes. There was a sudden flash, and in an instant my feet were enveloped in fire. I realized it then—the friction of the thongs, in my tremendous struggles, had set fire to my trousers.

"Suddenly, almost miraculously, the ropes unloosed. They had burned off, and my feet were free. I raised myself on my back and waved my blazing legs in the air. There was a whistle for down brakes, a jarring of the rails as the wheels slipped over them. The headlight was right over me, blinding me by its brilliancy, but too late! I felt the cowcatcher's nose gently rub my back, and then it stopped. I was saved!

"The whole train crew and all the passengers rushed up. In a few seconds the fire was extinguished, and I was carried by kind hands into one of the cars. Ah, that was a terrible experience! I hope I may never have another such."

"So do I," I joined in heartily.

The spenker paid no attention to me, but continued: "I lost 15 pounds in 15 minutes, a gold watch and $300. My trousers, a new pair not yet paid for, were burned into knickerbockers. The bruises I recovered from. It was just six years ago, and"—

He blew out a great puff of cigar smoke and was about to continue when above the buzz of conversation and rattle of the train arose the nasal tones of a farmer in the seat behind us as he exclaimed to his companion:

"Et do beat all the way this 'ere kentry's growin, Sam. Two years ago they wasn't a house or a store at Spikers Station, an now it's gettin quite a place."—Exchange.

He Objected.

Hostess—Well, Tommie, you can tell your mother for me that you are the best behaved boy at table I ever met.

Tommie—Thank you, ma'am, but I'd rather not.

Hostess—Rather not. And why, pray?

Tommie—She'd think I was ill, ma'am, and would send for the doctor.—Pearson's Weekly.

Food Products.

There is danger that certain desirable articles among the raw articles of food will soon be unattainable. Some indeed have already become so. We hear the regret often expressed that the healthful properties of certain food products, as bread flour, for example, are refined away in the modern mill process. Refinement is doing the same thing for cornmeal. It is bringing us something much more delicate in appearance, but not the ingredient called for by those ancient recipes for Indian pudding and brown bread which have been handed down from some colonial ancestor from generation to generation. The modern cornmeal will not produce the same compound, no matter how carefully the formula may be followed.

A number of these old recipes call, too, for brown sugar, something almost impossible now to procure. An inquiry for the "darkest brown sugar" at a grocer's will secure a moderately soft and pale yellow sugar; in some shops not even that, but only the moist, pure white C brand, can be had. In carrying out the directions of the recipe, a little molasses will have to be added, and even then it will not be quite the right thing. Molasses, too, is not to be had as dark as formerly, and the rich brown ginger cake of today has to take on an added and not desirable dose of spices to get its color.—New York Post.

The Growth of Flowers.

It has been noted that a large number of species of plants have their flowers bending to the southeast when opening. The well known compass plant, Silphium laciniatum, is one of this class. Some 80 years ago a paper was presented to the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, showing that all the growth made in the flowers of the compass plant was made within two or three hours after sunrise. All growth after this was at a standstill until the next day. It has since been noted that the flowers which turn toward the southeast in opening, as already referred to, are those which choose this particular part of the day as their growing time. It is just possible that the the heat and light after the rising of the sun has an influence on growth at that time, and this may be the reason for the turning in this particular direction. All plants have a specific time of growth, some in the morning, some at midday and some at evening or night. Growth is not continuous in any plant.—Meehan's Monthly.

The Morning Star.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

THURSDAY MORNING, AUG. 5, 1897

DOMESTIC EXPORTS

Larger in Value the Present Year Than Ever Before.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, August 4.—Corrected tables about to be published by the Bureau of Statistics, in connection with the monthly summary of finance and commerce, will show that the fiscal year ended June 30th was the largest in the history of domestic exports, the value of which reached $1,083,001 300. The next largest was the year 1892, when they amounted to $1 015 732,011. The increase over exports of the preceding year amounts to $168,800,818.

There has been a considerable increase in the exports of domestic manufactures. Comparing these with the year 1892 (the largest previous export year), when they were valued at $168 510,937 or 15.6 per cent. of the whole, the year 1897 shows that they amounted to $276,857,-881 or 26.78 per cent. of the total exports, which is an increase over the fiscal year ended June 30th, 1896, of $47,-788,658. The smallest previous per cent. was in 1880, when the percentage of domestic manufactures exported was 12 45 of the whole.

Domestic manufactures for the month of June exported were valued at $35,-673,904, an increase of about $4.000.000 over the same month of the preceding year, and the figures for June, 1897, are the largest for any similar period except the month of May, 1897, when the value of domestic exports amounted to $36,-457,449, and the month of March, 1897, when they were $35 874 469.

The exports of agricultural products for the month of August were valued at $88,998,895, as against $87.178,060 for the month of June, 1896. Agricultural exports for June, 1896, were 57.36 per cent., and for June, 1897, 54 96 per cent. of all exports. For the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1896, the value of agricultural exports amounted to $569,879,997, or 66.09 per cent. of the whole, as against $683,878,990, or 66.37 per cent. of the whole for the year ended June 30th, 1897, and the total value of all exports for the year amounted to $868,900,487, while for the year just ended the total gives as stated above amounts to $1,-083,001,300.

U. S. CRUISER RALEIGH.

The Demonstration Made by the Warship on the Coast of Morocco Brought the Authorities to Terms.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

TANGIER, August 4.—A special commission headed by Vice Consul Carleton, who recently participated in the demonstration made by the United States cruiser Raleigh at the principal ports on the coast of Morocco in consequence of the differences between the United States and Morocco relative to the rights of American citizens, has arrived at the city of Morocco, with important instructions in connection with American claims. It is reported that the commission has had an interview with the Grand Vizier.

The original difficulty arose over the discrimination of the authorities of Morocco against Americans in refusing to permit them to employ native help, a privilege allowed Europeans.

The arrival of the United States warships at Tangier brought the local authorities to terms and the subsequent demonstration by the Raleigh at the ports along the coast completed the lesson. The special commission headed by Mr. Carleton is now pressing the government to settle claims of Americans for indemnity, the principal one being that of the agent of an American firm at Tangier, who was assaulted and robbed by the Moors.

BATTLESHIP MAINE.

Official Report on the Collision in East River, New York.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, August 4.—The Navy Department has received a report from the special naval board which investigated the collision between the battleship Maine and the car-barge and pier in the East river last week. The board fully justifies Captain Sigsbee for the course he adopted in choosing a comparatively slight injury to the Maine by running into the pier, rather than bring serious disaster upon the steamer Isabella, which was crowded with people.

After reciting in detail the circumstances which led up to the collision, substantially as already published in the newspapers, the board has this to say: "The testimony shows that good order and discipline prevailed, and that all orders and signals were clearly understood and promptly obeyed. The damage done to the Maine was very slight. The necessary repairs can be made by the ship's force, and are partly completed already."

THE MINERS STRIKE.

No Material Change in the Situation—The Price of Coal Advancing—Strikers Appeal for Financial Assistance.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

PITTSBURG, August 4.—The miners strike situation has not changed materially since yesterday's report. Everything about the Turtle Creek camp was quiet, the only ripple of excitement being the hearing of President Dolan, and the other officials of the miners for riot and unlawful assemblage. The strikers claim twenty new accessions to their ranks to-day.

The customary march will be made to Plum Creek in the early morning and will be continued daily, the miners officials say, until the suspension in the DeArmitt's mines is complete.

At the hearing in the case of President Dolan and others for riot and unlawful assemblage this afternoon before Justice Semmes, a number of witnesses testified, but the justice reserved his decision until to-morrow afternoon.

Secretary Warner paid his compliments to President DeArmitt, of the New York and Cleveland Company, to-day in no very choice terms. The reason for this was the publication of the story that Mr. DeArmitt had said that $10 000 had been sent into the Pittsburg district by the West Virginia operators in order to bring about a strike of the miners in this district and thus force the price of coal up. Both the secretary and President M. Carrick, of the Painters' and Decorators' Union, characterized the story as a canard, and said that if it were true they would hardly send organizers into that district to try to induce the men to strike.

Organizer Cameron Miller is arranging for a meeting of business men and miners to take place at Roscoe, in the fourth pool, at 1 p. m. to-morrow.

Arrangements have been completed for the open air demonstration under the auspices of the United Labor League of West Pennsylvania to-morrow evening. The leaders expect 20,000 people to attend.

After the addresses an appeal will be made to the audience for financial assistance for the striking miners, and the leaders expect that the results will show that the public is in hearty sympathy with the miners in their struggle for living wages. The miners claim that if they can only get a little more financial assistance they will easily win the strike and are straining every nerve to accomplish their end.

The miners at the Schmock mines on the Redstone branch of the Pennsylvania railroad came out again to-day and the mines are closed down. This intelligence caused the price of coal to jump from 75 cents to $1.00 a ton and brokers say there will probably be another advance to $1.50 per ton before the end of next week.

PITTSBURG, August 4.—Eight hundred men, headed by a band, marched through the streets of Turtle Creek to-night. The strikers had gone to meet them. About 1,200 men were in line.

Rev. Wm. Hall, of the M. E. Church, Wilmerding, addressed a meeting after the parade. He complimented the miners on their manly fight and the peaceable manner in which it was being conducted. At the close of his address he handed the miners a bag containing $965, contributed by the citizens of Wilmerding.

J. B. Corry, a prominent coal operator, has sent a letter to Gov. Hastings calling attention to the open defiance of the sheriff's proclamation and the sheriff's failure to enforce the proclamation, and asking him to order out a sufficient force of the National Guards, whom Mr. Corry says are playing soldiers, to disperse the strikers.

WHITE EMPLOYES STRIKE

Against Negro Female Help in an Atlanta Cotton Mill.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

ATLANTA, August 4.—Two hundred women and girls employed at the Fulton bag and cotton mills in this city struck this morning because of the employment of negro female help by the management. At noon the four hundred men employed in the mills walked out in obedience to the orders of the Textile Workers' Union and in sympathy with the striking female operatives. This forced the closing down of the factory. Strikers gathered in angry groups about the mills and for a time it looked as if there might be a riot.

The Fulton bag and cotton mills is one of the largest concerns of the kind operating in the South. The corporation is successor to the old firm of Elsas, Nay & Co., and Jacob Elsas is its president. About eight hundred men, women and children are affected by the strike.

When the notice was put up that the mills were closed there was great disorder and it was the inclination of the strikers at first to cause trouble, but the police reserve force arrived in time to quell any disturbance. The local textile union took the side of the strikers and sent a notice to them to hold out for their rights. When this became known the employes of the mills, all white, walked out. Some of those who quit were the oldest and most reliable employes of the company. Mr. Elsa, president of the company, explained that it was only a small affair and would be arranged in a short while, after which the mills would re-open on full time.

The strikers, however, are determined, are receiving the aid of the local unions, and will hold out to the last. Several years ago the same experiment was tried in working negroes and with the same result. None of them have ever been employed in the mills. Unless the difficulty is arranged to-morrow, trouble is looked for.

FIRE IN PHILADELPHIA.

Seven Firemen and Two Workmen Seriously Burned by an Explosion—Other Firemen Injured.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

PHILADELPHIA, August 4.—A fire which broke out at 11 o'clock to-day in the big chemical works of D. Javne & Sons at Bermuda and Tuckers streets, Frankford, which are operated by the Barrett Manufacturing Company, importers and distillers of coal tar and manufacturers of roofing, did damage amounting to $100,000 before it was gotten under control. The fire originated in the big distilling house and is supposed to have been caused by the explosion of distilled oil. The distilling house and the valuable machinery was totally destroyed. Other buildings located near the burned structure were badly damaged by the flames and were only saved after a hard fight.

Seven firemen and two workmen were seriously burned by an explosion which occurred shortly after the fire broke out. Assistant Chief Engineer Charles McDade had all of his clothing burned off and is probably fatally injured. Seven other firemen were badly burned about the hands, but after having their wounds dressed left the hospital.

JAPAN AND HAWAII.

THE MATTER OF ARBITRATION OF DIFFERENCES.

The Japanese Government will Insist that the United States Government Assume Contingent Responsibility—Threatens a Naval Demonstration.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, August 4.—A special to the Herald from Washington says:

Japan will insist that the United States assume a contingent responsibility in the matter of arbitration of her differences with Hawaii on the subject of immigration and the tariff.

It is understood that this is one of the essential conditions upon which Japan will consent to arbitration and that if this responsibility is not assumed by the United States, Japan will break off negotiations looking to arbitration and back up her demands by a naval demonstration in Hawaiian waters.

The State Department has not yet received any official communication from the Japanese Government on this matter, and the administration has not indicated whether or not it will comply with the Japanese demand when made.

An official of the Japanese legation said in an interview: "I am not officially informed concerning the terms of arbitration, but that Japan should ask the United States to take recognition of it and assume an ultimate responsibility for the decisions of the arbitrator as regards it being carried out, seems to me very natural. If the United States refuse to give us a guarantee it is probable that the arbitration proposition will fail. We prefer to entertain a grievance and to indemnify our subjects ourselves than to arbitrate after the indignity by the refusal of the United States of so just a request. Neither the United States nor the Hawaiians can justly plead disinterestedness. Frequently in the Hawaiian-Japan correspondence of late, the pending annexation has figured as a factor in the situation. This should operate in the arbitration case as well."

AMERICAN WHEELMEN.

Great Gathering of Bicyclists in Philadelphia in Attendance Upon the National Meeting.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

PHILADELPHIA, August 4.—Close, sultry weather characterized the opening day of the eighteenth national meeting of the League of American Wheelmen, but it failed to suppress the enthusiasm or lessen the number of arrivals. The number of wheelmen already registered is far in excess of any previous race meets, and up to a late hour to-night every railroad train brought additional visitors.

The first scheduled run of the meet was started at 9 o'clock from the national headquarters. Over 1,500 riders, many of them women, covered the ten miles to the country club house of the Century Wheelmen, riding along the river drive in Fairmount Park and the picturesque Wissahickon Valley. After refreshments the run to the city was made, and a much larger number rode out on the Lancaster pike, the finest macadem road in the country, passing the homes of some of Philadelphia's wealthiest and most substantial citizens.

Special attention is being given the women visitors by an auxiliary committee of local wheelwomen.

Word was received to-day that the first circuit delegation of New York city riders left Jersey city this morning on bicycles to attend the meet.

Between 35 and 40 of the New York riders arrived here shortly after 7 o'clock. The few that dropped out came in later by train. The run was paced by J. F. Starbuck, but no attempt was made to break any record. The two women who started, Mrs. F. C. Kimball, of the Commonwealth Bicyclists of Boston, and Mrs. Etta Hadders, of New York, were among the first to arrive.

CRETAN SITUATION.

The International Fleet Will Oppose by Force the Entry of the Turkish Squadron.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

CANEA, CRETE, August 4.—On the receipt of the news that the Turkish squadron from the Dardanelles was coming into these waters the foreign warships got up steam and the international troops on shore have taken measures to anticipate any possible complications. The report and these preparations have greatly excited the Mussulmans.

According to a dispatch from Canea, Crete, the admirals of the international fleet have decided to oppose by force if necessary the entry of the Turkish squadron into Cretan waters.

The admirals and commanders met to-day on board the Italian flagship to discuss the matter.

In view of the possible arrival of the squadron a French warship has been dispatched to Sitia, an Italian man-of-war to Suda bay, an Austrian to Castelli, and a Russian to Retimo.

CONSTANTINOPLE, August 4.—The second squadron of Turkish warships, consisting of seven vessels, commanded by Hari Pasha, which sailed from the Dardanelles yesterday, has arrived at Sigri, island of Mitylene.

Referring to the fears expressed here that the departure of the Turkish ships might lead to a collision with the international fleet in Cretan waters, in view of the announcement of the foreign admirals that they have decided to oppose the landing of Turkish reinforcements in the island of Crete, the Turkish newspapers say that the squadron has only been ordered to carry out evolutions in the islands of the archipelago.

KLONDYKE GOLD FIELDS.

U. S. Government Officials Satisfied That They Are Within British Territory.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, August 4.—Incited by the newspaper publications recently, tending to throw doubt upon the ownership of the Klondyke gold fields, some of the high Government officials, who would naturally be expected to deal with the question if it comes to a practical issue, have been quietly looking into the matter with a view to preparing themselves for any controversy that may arise. Their views are in substance that there can be no valid objection advanced to the title of Great Britain to this territory. A careful examination of all of the reliable charts and maps made far enough back in date to be free from suspicion of influence of the recent heavy gold finds has convinced these officers that so far as the Klondyke fields, as defined by the latest reports, are concerned, there can be no question but that they lie east of the 141st meridian, which defines the boundary line, and so are within British territory by about 85 miles at least.

CRIMINAL ASSAULT.

By a White Man on a Respectable Young Woman in Beaufort County.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

RALEIGH, N. C., August 4.—A special to the News and Observer to-night tells of another rape in this State. This time it is a white man, Henry Jackson, and he attempted his hellish work on the body of a most respectable young woman, Miss Blanche Hodges, niece of the present sheriff of Beaufort county.

The President has appointed Alfred E. Holton to be U. S. attorney for the western district of North Carolina.

CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD.

Three Prominent Business Men of Pittsburg, Pa., Arrested and Bound Over to Court.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

PITTSBURG, August 4.—Three prominent business men of this city have been arrested and bound over to the October term of the court, charged with conspiracy to defraud the National Loan and Investing Company of Detroit, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the country. The case promises to be a sensational one, owing to the prominence of the accused and the amount claimed to have been secured by them, which is said to be in the neighborhood of $300,000. The men charged with the fraud are W. M. Benham, a well known attorney; D. W. Jones, a teller in the Pittsburg Bank of Savings, and William S. Green, secretary of the Calumet Coal and Coke Company.

A prominent East End real estate man is also said to be implicated, but has not been arrested. The information accuses the defendants of using the mails in devising a scheme to defraud. It is charged that Benham acted as attorney for the Detroit company and the other two as appraisers in placing mortgages, and by conniving together the company was induced to advance big money on property which had only a nominal value. The scheme is said to have been in operation for months.

THE METHODISTS.

Meeting of the Federation Committee of the Southern Church in Nashville.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NASHVILLE, TENN., August 4.—A meeting of national import was held in this city to-day by the Federation Committee of the M. E. Church South, appointed by the bishops, pursuant to a resolution adopted by the last General Conference. The committee consists of three bishops, three ministers and three laymen. Five were present to-day, Bishops Granby, Hargrove and Duncan, Dr. McDonnell and Maj. R. W. Jones. The objects of the committee are to negotiate with a similar committee of the Northern Church. The meeting to-day was preliminary to one to be held in January, 1898. Nothing in detail was given out, but the committee discussed the matters which will come up before the two committees in January next, especially in reference to the adjustment of missionary fields, so that both Churches would not have missions in the same territory. The committee representing the Northern Church has been invited to hold the joint session in Nashville.

ORDER OF HIBERNIANS.

Adjustment of a Breach that Has Existed for Years in the Association.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., August 4.—A breach that has existed for the past thirteen years in the Ancient Order of Hibernians of America has about reached adjustment. A meeting of the seceding delegates and the delegates of the old order was held to-day.

According to the articles of agreement it is specified "that all questions in dispute shall be referred to an arbitrator, who shall be chosen from the hierarchy of the United States and who shall be Irish by birth or descent. He is to have full power to reconcile existing differences."

Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, was agreed upon as arbitrator, and delegates were sent to Trenton to day to ask him to accept.

A NEGRO RAVISHER

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

FRANKLIN, GA., August 4.—Patton, a negro pugilist of some local celebrity, last night attempted to assault the daughter of Mrs. Matilda Walter, near here, and while being chased by A. Hopson and several others broke a leg over a fallen tree in the road. He then cut his throat rather than be lynched. The pursuing party found him dead.

FACTS!

High Prices for Carpets.

"And talking of carpets and carpet people, are you fully aware of what the new tariff means to the carpet buyer? Under the McKinley bill the price of carpets was 10 cents higher than they are to-day, and the new duty, as provided by the Dingley bill, on raw materials that enter into the manufacture of carpets is higher than under the McKinley bill. Naturally prices have to go up. Present prices can last only until the present stock of raw material is exhausted. The stock of carpet wool on hand is very light. The wise buyer will place his order without delay. Carpets will never be so cheap again in the next three years."

"High Prices for All Woollen Goods."
